Police of Three Cities Looking Out for Her Body.

Her Last Movements at Taylor's Hotel-A Friend's Fears.

No tidings of Princess Ann O'Delia Diss Dep'clock this afternoon.

The disposition evinced at first to treat her sensational approuncement of her intention to take her own life as one of her characteristic a growing belief that the woman really did intend to end an existence unique in its startling

Her preparations were elaborate and cer tainly seem to indicate that her intention was to abandon the business of living.

She dismissed her maid last Saturday. She surrendered up all her apparent possessions gave up many beretofore guarded secrets of her life for the rast few months, even to the innumerable debts that she had contracted, and finally renounced the Roman Catholic faith, of which she had been so long and warm an ad

She reveals in her letter to District-Attorney Nicoll, which she evidently intended to be considered as her will, that her two children are not sistera; but that Loia Alice, a pretty girl of eighteen years, was only an adopted daughter, while Dodo (Juliette) ten years old, is the child of Joseph H. Dies Debar and herself, born in Philadelphia, but that she loved Loia Alice

By this "will," the Madame disposes of the alleged spirit paintings with which she swindled Luther R. Marsh and the photographic sildes made from these danbs.

She directs that a fine Tiffany umbrelia and a superb copy of "The Imitation of presented to her by Princess Bonaparte in Rome in 1872, be given to Lawyer John D.
